Conservative Rabbis Hear Expert Deplore Abuse Of Rabbi As "Jack Of All Trades"

An authority on human resources warned at Liberty, N.Y., that Judaism in America was confronted with "a serious threat to its vitality and growth" because of the misuse of its rabbinical manpower.

Dr. Eli Ginzberg, director of the Conservation of Human Resources Project at Columbia University, declared that the "increasingly urbanized character of our society demands a rethinking of the use of trained ministers and challenges the American community to find new ways of recruiting high level manpower for spiritual leadership."

His address marked the opening of the five-day sixtieth anniversary convention of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, says the New York Times. The Assembly embraces 700 Conservative rabbis serving 1,500,000 congregants in the U.S., Canada, and Latin America.

Addressing 500 rabbis, Dr. Ginzberg who is also Professor of Economics at Columbia, deplored the abuse of the rabbi as a "jack of all trades," saying that in the course of the day the rabbi has to meet a wide variety of demands upon him, such as being a psychiatric counsellor, a lecturer to civic groups, and a speaker at meetings of women's auxiliaries.

"The rabbi who permits himself to become entangled in such a schedule does a disservice to his congregation, since he has not time for the quiet contemplation which alone can produce the insight and understanding necessary for spiritual leadership."

The address was based on reports Dr. Ginzberg had prepared for Conservative Judaism's three principal institutions, the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, which trains students for the Conservative rabbinate, the Rabbinical Assembly, and the United Synagogue of America, the congregational arm of Conservative Judaism.

Dr. Ginzberg declared that the American Jewish community was the "largest and most affluent in the history of the Jewish people" and that it had achieved the highest level of general education, says the New York Times. He suggested that highly trained congregational members "could readily relieve the rabbi from misusing his time" and that, in particular, they could deliver the invocations and benedictions at civic functions.

Two leaders of Conservative Judaism declared that the rabbinate was in a key position to guide the American Jewish community in resolving vexing Jewish religious, cultural, and communal problems. Rabbi Israel Goldstein, of Bnai Jeshurun Congregation in New York, urged the establishment of an organization to speak in behalf of all elements of the American Jewish community. He called on the various rabbinical groups of the three branches of Judaism, Orthodox, Reform, and Conservative, to take the lead in such a project.

His proposal was supported by Rabbi Wolfe Kelman, executive vice president of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, representing 700 Conservative rabbis. The addresses were at the Assembly's sixtieth anniversary convention.

Rabbi Goldstein, who is prominently identified with the Zionist movement, cited failures in efforts to create an organization of the type he advocated and declared it "imperative to make another attempt at this time."

He pointed to the problems in connection with Jewish religious life and culture, stressing those involving civil rights and liberties and church-state relationships "in which Jews have a stake both as citizens and Jews." He listed also the problems of anti-Semitism, Jewish philanthropic needs here and overseas, "the well-being of Israel and its meaning for American Jews and the sense of concern of the American Jewish community for Jewish communities everywhere in the world."

An organized Jewish community, guided by a representative body, he held, "means a pattern which would on the national level as well as on the local level, provide for common counsel and common action on matters of Jewish concern here and abroad."

Rabbi Kelman appealed in his address, to leaders of all faiths to join "their Negro colleagues" in the fight against racial segregation, says the New York Times.

Referring to Negro clergymen in the South, he said that "our fellow clergymen are sitting at the lunch counters and asserting their rights at the polling places."

"The inspiration of these men, who have dedicated themselves to the achievement of dignified equality by means of non-violent resistance," he asserted, "has brought new courage to our Negro minority fighting against humiliation and persecution to gain their legal and moral rights."

Swede Denies He Heads Malmo World Neo-Nazi Center

Dr. Per Engdahl, 51-year-old poet and specialist in political science, denied accusations that he headed an international anti-Semitic organization of a neo-Nazi stamp. These charges have appeared in newspaper articles quoting Swiss sources and some Jewish leaders.

"I'm nearly blind," the tall, thin Swede said in an interview in a shabby office. "How can anyone regard me as dangerous?"

Dr. Engdahl vigorously denied that he was anything but anti-Communist or that his group had any connection with the recent epidemic of synagogue desecrations in West Germany and other countries, says the New York Times. Swedish authorities appear to agree with this. The state police report that those persons whom they have caught as daubers of swastikas on synagogues in Sweden have turned out to be young pranksters or persons not fully responsible for their actions.

Swedish authorities also say that they have been unable to turn up any evidence that would implicate Swedish fringe groups having Nazi or Fascist leanings with anti-Semitic outrages in Sweden or abroad. Nevertheless, embarrassed by reports picturing Malmo as a command center for anti-Semitism, the Swedish Government ordered close surveillance of the activities of all such groups.

One example of this is the watch being kept in Malmo on twenty-seven young men who, the police say, form the Rikesparti (Reichs party) with twenty-three others in other parts of Sweden. The self-styled Fuehrer or leader, 27-year-old Goeran Assar Oredsson, says Jews in Sweden have too much economic power and something non-violent should be done about it. He can often be found in a smoke-filled beer parlor discussing his ideas to the blare of music from a jukebox.

Most of the members of his movement, he says, are between 23 and 30 years old. Dr. Engdahl, he adds, can have the older people. The Engdahl organization is called the New Swedish Movement. Its founder said it listed about 4,000 members but conceded that only a fraction of these were anything more than sympathizers.

Dr. Engdahl asserted that his movement was necessary because of what he described as the inevitable drift of democracies toward bureaucratic dictatorship, says the New York Times. The world's leading bureaucratic dictatorship, he said, is the Soviet Union. He said his group sought through propaganda to achieve a state of

Battle Over Aramco Bias Is Ten Years Old

The Arabian-American Oil Company was accused of using questionnaires "that would make the Nuremberg Laws look like the Boy Scout Manual" to weed out Jews from among employment applicants. This charge was made in the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court by Shad Polier, representing the American Jewish Congress.

The five-man court, headed by Presiding Justice Bernard Botein, was hearing an appeal by Aramco from a ruling last July 15 by Supreme Court Justice Henry Epstein that the company's employment practices violated the state's law against discrimination, says the New York Times. The court heard arguments and accepted briefs from both sides.

Chester Bordeau, counsel for Aramco, argued that being Jewish or having Jewish connections was "a bona fide disqualification" for employment. The Saudi Arabian Government will not admit such persons to its territory, in which Aramco carries on its field operations.

Mr. Polier, a national vice president of the A. J. C., said: "We are not complaining that they do not hire Jews and send them to Saudi Arabia since even the United States Government cannot send Jews there in the armed services."

He said the A. J. C. objection was to the questioning of applicants on whether they were Jews or married to Jews. Comparing this process to the Nazis' infamous anti-Jewish Nuremburg code, he charged that the company asked questions even about "remote relatives" who might be Jewish.

These questions, he said, should be left for the Saudi Arabian Government to ask if the occasion arose, says the New York Times. The battle over Aramco employment policies has gone on for ten years. Justice Epstein's ruling contradicted the findings of November 10, 1958, by Elmer A. Carter, now chairman of the State Commission Against Discrimination, who was then the investigating commissioner.

Maurice Schwartz was Leading Figure Of Yiddish Theatre, Toured World With Repertoire Of 150 Plays

Maurice Schwartz, the leading figure of the Yiddish Theatre, died of a heart attack in Beilinson Hospital in Petah Tikva near Tel Aviv, Israel. He was 69 years old. Mr. Schwartz suffered a heart attack a month ago in Tel Aviv while preparing a production of "Kiddush Hashem" by Sholem Asch. He had suffered eleven attacks since.

Until his New York Yiddish Art Theatre was closed down several years ago it had gained stature by producing such actors as Paul Muni, Stella Adler, Kurt Katch, and Joseph Buloff, says the New York Times. After touring with part of his company and then making guest appearances in many parts of the world, Mr. Schwartz arrived in Israel last January, bent on establishing a center for Yiddish art.

Within a week of his arrival he had drawn together a company of thirty Israeli actors and plunged into rehearsals for his first show, I. J. Singer's "Yoshe Kalb." It opened early in March, with Mr. Schwartz playing the lead role of Reb Melech.

Mr. Schwartz often was called the John Barrymore of the Yiddish theatre. An actor in the broad fashion, he was not parsimonious in use of voice or gesture.

Although identified mainly with the Yiddish Art Theatre, which he founded in 1918 and which was a Mecca for Jewish theatregoers on New York's Lower East Side until it was disbanded in 1950, Mr. Schwartz was a frequent performer in Yiddish theatres throughout the world.

Writing in 1947 about Mr. Schwartz and his theatre, Brooks Atkinson, drama critic of The New York Times, said:

"The Yiddish Art Theatre has continued to stand for something worth respecting. Something of the traditional theatre survives under his auspices. He gives his audiences story, colorful costumes, beards, lots of scenery, music and acting. For he is not afraid of the theatre.

"If the acting in Second Avenue is not precisely in the grand manner," Mr. Atkinson continued, "it has animation and latitude, with wide gestures, and you always know that you are not in a library. Without being intolerably flamboyant, Mr. Schwartz acts with boldness, using his hands continuously, waggling an eloquent forefinger and rising shaggy eyebrows to project astonishment."

Mr. Schwartz' Yiddish Art Theatre was sometimes likened in its field to Dublin's Abbey Theatre and the Moscow Art Theatre, says the New York Times. Rising costs and dwindling audiences led to its disbandment, although it was briefly activated in 1955 as a subsidized venture.

Mr. Schwartz and his company toured the United States and also Canada, South America, Europe, Israel, and South Africa. It had a repertoire of 150 plays ranging from Shakespeare, Lope De Vega, and George Bernard Shaw (all given in Yiddish) to Sholem Aleichem and Sholem Asch.

In addition to Reb Malech, his best-known acting roles were Luka in Gorki's "The Lower Depths," Oswald in Ibsen's "Ghosts," Max Ashkenazi in "The Brothers Ashkenazi," Gaev in Chekhov's "The Cherry Orchard," Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice" and as King Lear.

Mr. Schwartz was born in Sedikov in the Russian Ukraine on June 18, 1890, the son of Isaac and Rose Bernholtz Schwartz. He was brought by his parents to New York in 1901 and grew up on the streets of the Lower East Side, where he developed an early interest in the theatre.

He made his first appearance on the stage in 1905 in Baltimore with a Yiddish stock company. He subsequently played in stock in Cincinnati, Chicago, and Philadelphia. In 1912, he was engaged by David Kessler for the opening of the Second Avenue Theatre and

Mrs. Singer was in a two-piece, black and white suit, made with a V-neckline; and short sleeves; with a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Waxman wore a turquoise-blue, silk shantung sheath, cut with a V-neckline; and three-quarter-length sleeves; and her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Y. Singer wore a black, silk sheath, which had a square neckline; and three-quarter-length sleeves; with a corsage of pink roses. Sheila wore a white, organza, shirtmaker dress, made with a Peter Pan collar; three-quarter-length sleeves; and a bouffant skirt; with turquoise-blue shoes; and a wristlet of turquoise-blue-tinted baby roses. A heart-shaped birthday cake of pink, white, and green, and white carnations, red roses, and yellow pom-poms trimmed the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Silverberg, 2115 Goyer Avenue, entertained at a dinner at their home to celebrate the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Issie Coleman (nee Sylvia Silverberg), 3185 Bedford Road. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman have a son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Coleman, 5630 Monkland Avenue; and two daughters: Miss Doris Coleman; and Beatrice, aged thirteen years. Mrs. Issie Coleman is the daughter of Mrs. Mollie Silverberg, 4129 Clark Street. Mrs. I. Coleman wore a grey and white chiffon sheath, made with a square neckline, cape sleeves and draped, front skirt; with black patent leather accessories, and a corsage of pink and white carnations. Present with the above were: Dr. and Mrs. Mervin Silverberg, and Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Silverberg, the sons and daughters-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Silverberg; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bard, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tobman, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Bard, brothers-in-law and sisters of Issie Coleman; Mr. and Mrs. Abe Kingston, Mrs. Frances Kolakofsky, the brother-in-law and sisters, and Mr. and Mrs. B. Silverberg, the brother and sister-in-law, of Mrs. Issie Coleman; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moscovitch, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Teitelbaum, Mr. and Mrs. M. Guttenplan, Mr. and Mrs. S. Sternberg, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Kingstone, Mr. and Mrs. David Silverberg, Daniel Kingstone and his fiancee, Miss Hadassa Nagler. A centerpiece of white and pink carnations and gladioli adorned the table.

Mrs. David Peters, 476 Querbes Avenue, entertained at a luncheon in the Capri Hotel to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of her daughter, Rhona; sister of Jerry Peters, 2875 Brinton Road. Mrs. David Peters was in a navy-blue shantung sheath, with its own jacket trimmed with white; with a white organza hat; and a corsage of white carnations. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jerry Peters, wore a brown brocaded dress, under a matching cocktail jacket; with beige accessories. Rhona wore a light blue, flowered, polished cotton dress; and a white gardenia bouquet. Present were: Mesdames F. Flesher, L. Petegorsky, B. Peters, all of Ottawa, Ont.; R. Steinberg, of Toronto, Ont.; J. Wise, B. Moscovitch, J. Applebaum, M. J. Plotnick, L. Plotnick, B. Plotnick, H. Jason, F. Flesher; her aunts; William Sucher, A. Kastner, J. Ferst, B. Laibovitch, S. Covet, Philip Noble, D. Schnoider, S. Dizgun, B. Finkelstein, A. Abrams; Rosalie Moscovich, Reisha Applebaum, Beverly Propus, Margaret Redmond, Roslyn Plotnick, Marilyn Peters, Florence Covet, Stephanie Noble, Bella Katz, Miriam Zamilevitch, Anna Sucher, Mona Fergenbaum, Adele Zavalkoff, Vivian Saginur, Ruth Pinchuk, Guta Grushka, Dobby Krupp, Sharon Tannenbaum, Sally Klinsberg, Simone Malewski, and Norma Wasserman. A pink and white birthday cake decorated the table. Jerry Peters took moving pictures and snap shots of the party; and sang, accompanied by his cousin, Rosalie Moscovitch, who played the piano. After the luncheon the guests were invited to the home, where Mrs. Jerry Peters cut the birthday cake for each guest to take a piece home.

Over a million cases of smallpox took thousands of lives within the past year in Pakistan. Pakistan is a long way from Canada in terms of miles, but only hours away in terms of jet travel. One has only to recall the swiftness of the spread of Asiatic flu a short time ago to realize that there are no physical barriers to disease, aside from that of immunization.

He visualizes industry-wide organizations of corporate co-operation and the establishment of national instead of geographical election districts so that a professor could elect a professor to Parliament and a steel worker could elect a steel worker.

There are smaller movements in West Germany, France, Italy and other European countries. In 1951 leaders of these groups met at Malmo to form the European Social Movement or what has since become known as the Maimo Movement. Dr. Engdahl, who is on its board, said the purpose of the international organization was to balk Communist aggression through the formation of a United States of Europe and to consolidate "the national traditions of each member country."

Dr. Engdahl readily agreed that former Nazis and former Fascists played leading roles in the Malmo Movement. But he said he did not believe in holding a man's past against him. For example, one of his friends is the district leader of the New Swedish Movement, Yngve Nordgord, a 60-year-old singing teacher. He was an S.S. (Elite Guard) officer in Hitler Germany during the last year of World War II.

Dr. Engdahl said he was at a loss to explain why his name should be linked with anti-Semitic manifestations or why West German and Swiss authorities refused him a visa, says the New York Times. He said that racist ideas had been kept out of both the Malmo and the New Swedish Movements and that the latter even had on its board a Stockholm lawyer of Jewish ancestry.

BATTLE OVER ARAMCO

Justice Epstein decided that the A. J. C. was entitled to the status of a "person claiming to be aggrieved" under the anti-discrimination law and that the oil company was guilty of discrimination. He referred the A. J. C. complaint back to the commission for appropriate action. The commission did not appeal from his decision, but Aramco did.

If the Appellate Division upholds Justice Epstein, legal observers said, it will probably mean full reconsideration of the matter by S. C. A. D. If it upholds Commissioner Carter's view that would probably end the matter in the New York State courts, they said.

Mr. Bordeau, of the law firm of White & Case, argued that the A. J. C. complaints were unfounded both because discrimination was a practical necessity and because the A. J. C. was not qualified as an "aggrieved person" under the law.

The A. J. C. brief said that it recognized that Aramco could not overcome the Saudi Arabian refusal of visas to Jews and so could claim a "bona fide qualification" exemption from hiring them for work that would require them to travel there, says the New York Times. But it said the company should "stop assisting Saudi Arabia in discriminating against Jews."

Anyone who walks to or from work or school during the spring and summer should keep up that good exercise. Dry air in overheated buses and homes is bad for the respiratory organs; fresh air is much healthier.

The Jewish Role In Ancient And Medieval Medicine

A recent issue of the semi-annual Hebrew Medical Journal, Volume 2, 1959, edited by Dr. Moses Einhorn, of New York, contains a number of articles which stress the Jewish role in medicine throughout the ages. With this issue the journal concluded the thirty-second year of its existence. Written in Hebrew and English, the Hebrew Medical Journal has played an important part in the fostering of a medical literature and terminology in the language of the Bible.

In the section "Historical Medicine", Dr. Benjamin Lee Gordon discusses medical jurisprudence in Hebrew culture and compares it with that prevailing in Babylonian, Greek, Roman, and Medieval cultures. He notes that regulations governing the medical practice were always in direct proportion to the value placed on human life and that this in turn was closely related to the degree of cultural advancement. He examines the status of the physician and the various methods of treatment throughout the ages, making special reference to the eye.

In an article entitled, "Medicine, Judaism And The Hebrew Language", Dr. Asher Goldstein points out that medicine became an integral part of Jewish life and that the Mosaic Law may be considered the foundation of prophylactics. According to the author, medicine during the Middle Ages was mainly in the hands of two peoples, the Arabs and the Jews. It was the Jews who guarded the medical heritage of mankind and it was through them that Arab medicine became known to the world. When the Hebrew University in Jerusalem was opened, many doubted whether medicine could be adequately taught in the Hebrew language. Dr. Goldstein notes, however, that considerable progress has already been made in recent years in forming a synthesis of Biblical, Talmudical, and Medieval sources and in coining new medical terms.

In the section "Talmud And Medicine", Dr. Jacob Rabin surveys Talmudic folklore at the beginning of the present era and cites cures and practices prevalent at that time. In another article in the same issue Dr. Noah Shapiro discusses the subject of animal-derived spices and perfumes in Hebrew sources. The author shows that in the course of centuries Hebrew literature accumulated a great deal of variegated knowledge about strange and rare odiferous substances produced by the musk and the civet cat, and that attempts were made to explain the nature and characteristics of these substances. Another feature in this issue is the scholarly and thoughtful essay by Dr. Zussman Muntner on the history of medicine. He deals with the interrelationship of medicine with the sciences and other cultural fields, and the importance of this field to the student as well as to the physician. From historical medicine, says Dr. Muntner, both student and physician derive orientation, practical knowledge, and an understanding of the relationship between the various branches of medicine, as well as the relationship between

CLASS IN COOKERY

CARROT CAKE

one cup sugar	three-quarters cup oil
one and one-half cup flour	one teaspoon baking powder
one teaspoon soda	one teaspoon cinnamon
one-quarter teaspoon salt	one cup grated carrots
two eggs	one-half cup crushed nuts

Blend sugar and oil. Add eggs one at a time and beat well after each. Add flour, baking powder, soda and salt which have been sifted together twice. Add cinnamon, carrots, and crushed nuts and mix till smooth. Pour batter into a slightly-greased loaf pan and bake at 375 degrees for thirty-five minutes.

Mrs. R. Kronick.
807 Bertrand Street, Montreal.

COFFEE CAKE

one-quarter pound butter	one teaspoon cinnamon
one cup sugar	two eggs
two cups flour	one cup sour cream
two teaspoons baking powder	one-half teaspoon salt
one-quarter cup crushed walnuts	one teaspoon baking soda
	one teaspoon brown sugar

Mix together the melted butter, sugar, eggs, and sour cream. In a separate bowl sift together the flour, baking powder, salt, and baking soda. Add the flour mixture to the egg mixture and stir. Grease an eight-by-eight pyrex pan and pour half of the batter into it. Sprinkle the cinnamon, walnuts, and brown sugar mixture over the top. Pour the rest of the batter over that and sprinkle top with the remaining cinnamon mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for forty minutes.

• The Canadian Jewish Review is one of only 35 Audit Bureau of Circulations magazines in Canada, and one of only three published weekly in English. It gives wide, city-to-city coverage for your advertising message, to a high-ranking consumer audience. Received every Friday in the mail, it is read by the family groups which gather together for the Sabbath observance on Friday nights. Every issue is a guide to planning and purchasing, in able-to-buy homes. Sold by subscription only, the Canadian Jewish Review reaches a select market weekly, families who are receptive to the best in goods and services.

• The Canadian Jewish Review fills a definite need as a link between the individual family and the whole Jewish world at large. It is informative about the trends in Jewish thought and social welfare in these changing times; the important Jewish world news; and reports on the organizational life of all ages in the Jewish group, and all interests in the family, particularly homemakers and businessmen.

The Canadian Jewish Review is one of only 35 Audit Bureau of Circulations magazines in Canada. It gives wide, city-to-city coverage for your advertising message, and reaches a select consumer audience. The Canadian Jewish Review is received every Friday in the mail, and is read by the family groups which gather together for the Sabbath observance on Friday nights. Every issue is a guide to planning and purchasing through each week. Items of interest to women, as well as to the family in general appear in every issue. It is a community record; it is instructive about the trends in Jewish thought, and the important Jewish world news of the day. The Canadian Jewish Review reaches the able-to-buy homes, with high-ranking purchasing power, where quality and prestige of goods and services are of paramount importance.

● JEWISH SCHOOLS ●
affiliated with the Bureau of Jewish Education held a Bible contest sponsored by the department of education and culture of the Jewish Agency. Similar contests were held in over forty other American and Canadian cities. Pupils of the Jewish schools between the ages of twelve to seventeen years were eligible. The contest was organized for Junior and Senior groups in English and Hebrew. The Bible contest committee, with Dr. A. Eisenberg, of New York, as chairman, included Dr. Joseph Diamond, director of the Toronto Bureau of Jewish Education. Winning contestants from Toronto will join with the other finalists for the contest in New York on June 12. The aim of the contest is to promote greater interest in the reading and study of the Bible among Jewish young people, and to strengthen the role of Bible studies in school curriculm. THE JEWISH ROLE IN ANCIENT AND MEDIEVAL MEDICINE medicine as a whole to other cultural phenomena.

In the "Medical Section", Dr. H. Necheles deals with psychosomatic effects on organic diseases. This theme is of great importance in the field of gastroenterology where it is claimed that many of the diseases may be produced by psychosomatic and somatopsychic factors. He concludes that these factors play an important role in the health and well-being of man, but he stresses that there is no proof that by themselves these factors can produce diseases, mental or organic.

The Hebrew Medical Journal is a bi-lingual medical publication which appears semi-annually, and also in an annual Israel edition. In its more than three decades of existence, the journal has shown special interest in the development of medical literature and terminology in the language of the Bible. Besides articles on contemporary medical subjects, it lists among its sections such unique topics as "Israel and Health", "Medicine in the Bible and the Talmud", "Old Hebrew Medical Manuscripts", "Historical Medicine", etc. These and other features have made the journal the only publication of its kind in the world. The Hebrew articles contained in the journal are also rendered in English translations for the convenience of the readers.

A Message From Orthodox Jews

Over the name of the World Union of Orthodox Jewish Communities, 493 Third Avenue, New York 16, N.Y., the following appeared as an advertisement in the New York Times.

Two years ago we made public the fact that religion was being forcibly repressed in the State of Israel, for which the government was fully responsible. Since then the situation has not improved but has deteriorated considerably.

In November, 1958, the present Israeli government official, Moshe Shapiro (at that time not in the government), confirmed in a speech at Atlantic City, part of which was reported in The New York Times, that forcible repression of religion is being carried out in Israel, and he put the blame directly on the government.

Among the many forms of religious persecution that are practiced constantly, we cite the example of the forcible anti-religious training of the youth. This is especially conspicuous in the case of the children of new immigrants. These penniless newcomers, almost in every case deeply religious and strictly orthodox in their previous communities, are taken to remote and isolated places in order to prevent any contact between them and the religious community in the State of Israel. The Schools in these places are strictly anti-religious. Parents are powerless to protest against the irreligious training of their children, for those that show the least resistance are harassed and are deprived of their jobs. The majority of the youth has thus been estranged from every religious practice and attitude, against their parents' wishes. This is in contradiction of the solemn promises made to the parents by the agents of the immigration department, who had given their assurance that the children would be given religious education on coming into the State of Israel. Mr. Shragai, an important official in the immigration department, stated recently in an article in the Tag-Morning Journal that the Israeli government is thus embittering the lives of the new immigrant parents.

American Jews, who have a large share in the development of the State of Israel, will be interested in this information, and it devolves upon them to utilize their influence upon the Israeli government to permit the harassed religious populace to live according to their principles, unmolested.

We also wish to state that the government of Israel cannot speak in the name of Jewish people or in the name of independent religious Jews, who are not represented by spokesmen who do not believe in the Almighty and His Torah.

We therefore protest sharply against the statements made publicly by Mr. David Ben-Gurion, during his recent visit, at the Brandeis University in Boston and subsequently at the Yeshiva University in New York. The statements were heard by radio and television and were printed in the newspapers. In these statements he denies principles of the Jewish faith which have been our heritage for thousands of years and for which our fathers have countless times given their lives. We declare that it is an outrage that one who heads a Jewish state should make such statements. His acts against the Jewish religion are much worse; but we condemn his words because they were made in public and create the impression that Jews agree with him.

We therefore declare that the Jewish people hold steadfast to the faith of their fathers, and we deny to Mr. Ben-Gurion the right to speak in our name. Only those who believe in the Torah, and in the Supreme Being who chose our people to receive the Torah, may speak in the name of the Jewish people.

what they say about every Jewish household needing a Jewish publication. Every Jewish household, no matter how new, does need a Jewish paper! And that paper should be the Canadian Jewish Review. Those who subscribe to it for themselves and their children help to keep their community Jewish and strong. You, too?

Aufbau Marks 25th Year Of Refugee Service As Largest U. S. German Weekly

After a generation of aiding refugees from Nazism, Aufbau (meaning Reconstruction), America's largest German language weekly, celebrated its 25th anniversary with a special edition of 140 pages devoted to the issues facing a new generation of readers. Messages from world leaders, headed by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, of Western Germany, cited Aufbau's contribution in aiding former refugees rebuild their lives in the U.S. and in serving as a bridge between the United States and the German-speaking world.

Confronting a problem yet to be overcome, German political and intellectual leaders contribute to a symposium in the anniversary issue on the question, "Can anti-Semitism be eradicated in Germany?" The answers, ranging from confidence to doubt, stressed the need for constant alertness and constructive education to overcome the perennial problem of prejudice. Having chronicled the contribution to American science and culture of a generation of former refugees, Aufbau features in its anniversary edition the achievements and aspirations of their sons and daughters. Many of them already have acquired national reputations in their fields.

Dr. Manfred George, Aufbau's editor, announced that, to further international understanding, the newspaper will make a series of awards. The Federal Republic of Germany, in honor of Aufbau's service to former Germans who found haven in the United States, will play host for six weeks to a journalism student or a young reporter selected from among the sons and daughters of German language immigrants since 1933. The West German government first invited one of Aufbau's editors to visit Germany and then, at the newspaper's suggestion, agreed to award the trip to a young journalist of Aufbau's selection. Award applications, according to Dr. George, were issued to journalism schools and newspapers on May 1 and the winner, to be announced by July 15, will spend four weeks with the Sueddeutsche Zeitung in Munich to learn the operation of one of Germany's leading dailies, and two weeks traveling through the Federal Republic.

In honor of the anniversary, an award for study in Israel will be made by the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovoth, Israel, and the Aufbau Friends of the Weizmann Institute. Each have contributed $2,500 to establish the Albert Einstein Fellowship, in honor of the late scientist who was a member of Aufbau's advisory board and a contributor to the newspaper. The fellowship will be awarded to a master of science in biology, physics, chemistry, or applied mathematics for eight months' study at the Institute, named after the late Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Jewish scientist and statesman. In addition, former refugees, who were helped by Aufbau to rebuild their lives in this country, will participate in an anniversary contest to report, their most interesting experiences in the United States. Aufbau readers in 83 countries, for whom the newspaper serves as a link with America, will take part in a separate contest to tell what the newspaper means to the world.

President Eisenhower, in his congratulatory message, noted that "in its service to refugees from oppression, Aufbau has helped to prepare many for the responsibilities of citizenship in a free land. With facts clearly reported and opinion plainly stated, this newspaper has contributed much to the strengthening of our society."

In the symposium on anti-Semitism guarded optimism was the predominant note of response from Mayor Brandt, of West Berlin; and Mayor Max Brauer, of Hamburg; leaders in the West German legislature; and such writers as Hans Habe, Oscar Maria Graf, and Herman Kesten. The majority expressed the view that anti-Semitism can be eradicated in Germany, but only if the German people, especially the youth, can learn to face their past, not gloss over it or try to cover it up.

In its report on the children of the refugees, Aufbau salutes such members of the younger generation as Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, director of the international seminar at Harvard University; Theodore Bikel, the actor playing with Mary Martin in "Sound of Music"; Andre Previn, pianist and conductor; Judith Malina, founder of the Living Theater; Frederic Morton, novelist; Peter Kortner, of television, Gerd Oswald, movie director; and Theodore Apstein, dramatist. Dr. Alfred Prager, chairman of Aufbau's Board, pointed out that the new generation is following in the footsteps of a generation which included such men as Einstein and Dr. Thomas Mann, the novelist; a generation which made a unique contribution to the science and culture of its adopted country.

According to Ludwig Lowenstein, president of The New World Club, Inc., publisher of Aufbau, applause for the newspaper has come from President Heinrich Lubke, former President Theodor Heuss, and Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano, of Western Germany; from Israel's President Ben Zvi, and from Dr. Albert Schweitzer, at his hospital in Lambarene, French Equatorial Africa, who sent his best wishes as "a faithful reader." Among American political leaders saluting the newspaper were: U.S. Vice-President Richard Nixon, Adlai Stevenson, former Democratic Presidential candidate, Senator John F. Kennedy, Democratic presidential aspirant, Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York and former Senator Herbert H. Lehman.

From France and Britain, Latin America, and Africa, came the congratulations of the leaders in journalism. American publishers praising the newspaper included Robert M. White II, of the N. Y. Herald Tribune; Walter Annenberg, of the Philadelphia Inquirer; Charles McCabe, of the New York Mirror; and Arthur Hays Sulzberger, of the New York Times, whose comment sums up theirs: "For a quarter of a century, in war and peace, Aufbau, under its valiant editor, Mr. Manfred George, has fought against tyranny and oppression, for liberty, democracy, and human dignity," Mr. Sulzberger said.

remained there until he founded the Yiddish Art Theatre.

Mr. Schwartz' adopted daughter, Risa, an actress, is appearing on Broadway in the only female role in Paddy Chayevsky's "The Tenth Man." She did not go on the day her father died, her role being played by Renee Haafner, her understudy, says the New York Times. Also surviving Mr. Schwartz are his widow, the former Anna Bordofsky, and an adopted son, Marvin.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication in Canada printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is not sponsored by a group or an organization and which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Could you give your child an "A" IN THIS IMPORTANT SUBJECT?

How to teach your youngsters to SAVE

It's up to you. In this case, you are the teacher. And it won't do any good to complain to your P.T.A. Saving is one subject that has to be taught in the home . . . and, like most subjects, the better it's taught, the better will it be learned.

For conscientious parents who are anxious to develop habits of thrift and self-reliance in their children the B of M offers a helpful little booklet "How to teach your youngsters to SAVE". A few minutes study will equip you to be a more proficient teacher. Ask for your copy at your neighbourhood branch of "MY BANK".
